Scope

This policy provides guidance to EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors on the purchase and sale of securities of the Company:

- in order that breaches of the Australian Corporations Act do not occur; and
- to ensure dealings by EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors in securities of the Company are fair, and are seen to be fair.

EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors requiring further information or guidance should contact their supervisor or the Company Secretary.

Prohibitions

In accordance with the provisions of the Corporations Act, no EDL Group Director, EDL Group employee or regular EDL Group contractor or any other person can trade in the securities of the Company while in possession of "inside information", either directly or through another person.

EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors employees should never communicate inside information to any other person, except in the proper conduct of their duties to the Company.

Inside information is information which a person knows, or reasonably ought to know:

- is not generally available; and
- might have a material effect on the price of the Company's securities if it was generally available.

Inside information can include matters of speculation or supposition and matters relating to intentions or likely intentions of a person.

Information is regarded as being likely to have a material effect on price if it would, or would be likely to, influence persons who commonly invest in securities in deciding whether or not to deal in the Company's securities.

Examples of inside information could be:

- (a) the financial performance of the Company against its budget;
- (b) changes in the Company's actual or anticipated financial condition or business performance;
- (c) changes in the capital structure of the Company, including proposals to raise additional equity or borrowings;
- (d) proposed changes in the nature of the business of the Company;
- (e) changes to the Board of Directors or significant changes in senior management;
- (f) an undisclosed significant change in the Company's market share;
- (g) likely or actual entry into, or loss of, a material contract;
- (h) material acquisitions or sales of assets by the Company;

- (i) a proposed dividend or other distribution or a change in dividend policy; or
- (j) a material claim against the Company or other unexpected liability.

This is not an exhaustive list.

A breach of the insider trading rules may lead to criminal and civil liabilities and, in the case of EDL Group employees, a breach of the insider trading rules will also be regarded by the Company as serious misconduct which may lead to disciplinary action or dismissal from Energy Developments.

No Short Term Trading

- EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors may not engage in the short term trading of the securities of the Company, eg. a purchase and sale of the same securities within a six month period.

In very limited circumstances, such as the exercising of options in employee share ownership plans, this requirement may be relaxed at the discretion of the Board.

Blackout Periods

- Subject at all times to not being in possession of inside information, EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors may deal in the Company's securities at any time other than during the following periods (each a "blackout period"):

 - in the case of EDL Group Directors, notification to the Chairman;
 - in the case of the Chairman, notification to the Chairman of the Audit and Risk Committee;

general offer to all shareholders, such as a Dividend Reinvestment Plan, a Share Purchase Plan, or a general buy-back offer.

- Employees who have or may receive options, rights or similar instruments over the Company's securities may not enter into transactions in associated products (such as warrants) without the prior approval of the Board.
- EDL Group Directors and EDL Group employees must not engage in hedging arrangements over unvested securities issued pursuant to any Company share scheme, Performance Rights Plan or Option Plan.
- In relation to vested securities, these may only be hedged once they are exercised into shareholdings and only on the condition that the details of the hedge are fully disclosed (eg: to the ASX and in the Annual Report, as appropriate), and that the hedge transaction is treated as a sale or purchase of securities and the relevant notifications must be made in accordance with this policy.

Hedging arrangements include where a person enters into transactions in products associated with the Company's securities which operate to limit the economic risk of their security holding in the Company.

Securities in other companies (eg other listed companies that the Company has business with)

EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors are not to deal in securities (eg shares, options, etc) of other companies if the Director or Officer possesses "inside information" or price sensitive information in relation to that other company.

This includes where, through work, a Director or Officer becomes aware of price sensitive information relating to a customer, supplier, contractor, joint venture partner or other business partner of the Company.

Reporting Obligations

EDL Group Directors and EDL Group employees who are "key management personnel" for the purposes of the Company's financial statements are to advise the Company Secretary as soon as possible after a trade involving Company securities has occurred.

In the case of Directors, notice must be given in sufficient time so that the Company Secretary can advise the Australian Stock Exchange (on behalf of the Director), within the required time limit (currently five business days of the relevant trade).

Who to contact?

The Company Secretary can assist with all queries relating to this Policy and the process and paperwork for seeking clearance to trade, and the Company Secretary is responsible for maintaining this policy and ensuring that it is communicated to EDL Group Directors, EDL Group employees and regular EDL Group contractors.
